LEGISLATURES AND MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENTS.

THE Legislature of Alabama recently attempted to uproot the city government of Mobile, and they succeeded so far that two municipal governments are now in full blast in that favored locality. A new Mayor has been nominally installed before the old one vacated his position. As a result, the telegraph informs us that "Price (the old Mayor) still holds his courts and controls the police, while Harrington (the Mayor created by the Legislature) manages the clerical and legislative branch of the city government." Harrington has called for troops to enforce his authority, but the Governor positively refuses to send them, and meanwhile the puzzled citizens hardly know whom they should obey or what mischiefs may result from the prevailing confusion. In Philadelphia we have not yet been placed in quite as bad a position as the people of Mobile, but from present indications we are rapidly approaching it. In the decision given by Judge Sharswood on the City Trusts bill, the principle is boldly enunciated that "fae Legislature, acting for the State, can resume all the franchises of the municipality into its own hands;" and the disposition to exercise supreme control over municipal affairs at Harrisburg has increased so rapidly of late years that we have only the semblance of a local government left, and for all practical purposes, except the fixing of tax rates, Councils might nearly as well be disbanded. If the appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of the State in the City Trusts bill does not prove successful, the control of the Girard Estate will speedily pass into the hands of a committee created by Legislative authority. A bill appointing a Legislative Committee to erect a House of Correction was recently hurried through the Legislature, and it is said that it has already received the signature of the Governor. The Police Commission bill was only defeated by an unexpected veto. The Legislature now has under consideration a bill affecting the organization of the School Board. From time to time the city is compelled to incur heavy expenditures for the erection of new bridges, or to give the use of her streets gratuitously to chartered companies, by Legislative authority; or the salaries of her officials are unnecessarily increased; and, practically, the doctrine is now fully accepted that the city has no rights which the State is either bound or disposed to respect. We do not pretend that Councils on the one hand, Legislature on the other, are always either wright or wrong, but the prevailing system of dividing authority gives to every knavish proposition a double chance of success, and in the long run it works great injury to the interests of the people. The theoretical control of the city by the State practically means a grant of absolute power on local questions to the Senators and Representatives of Philadelphia, when they are united, and although we are not afflicted, like Mobile, with two Mayors, we are subjected to two sets of conflicting authorities whose disjointed operations produce scarcely less confusion than would result from rival municipal governments. When the Act of Consolidation was passed, it was commonly supposed that the citizens of Philadelphia would be permitted to govern themselves; but despite the care displayed in preparing that act, it has proved a failure, and the whole framework of the political organization of the city has since been se thoroughly reorganized by legislative patchwork that nothing but the shreds of the old charter remain. With each new year the importance of municipal government increases with our rapid growth, our pressing needs, our heavy debt and onerous taxation, and yet with each new year it receives less attentive consideration, and becomes more the sport of a battledore and shuttlecock game between Councils and the Legislature. For these evils a cure could be devised if the best men of both parties applied themselves earnestly to the task Guided by the light of past experience and a full knowledge of the existing defects, careful inquiry would enable them to discover a remedy, and if it was embodied in a comprehensive bill which commanded popular approval, there is a fair prospect that some future Legislature would be found willing to pass it, and that a line of demarcation would thus be established between the authority of the State and the city, which would give to Philadelphia a chance for progress and prosperity. As matters are drifting now, taxpayers are compelled to pay all the local expenses that may be authorized either in Independence Hall or in the State Capitol,

AN EFFORT is being made in the Legislature to have the publication of Bates' "History of the Pennsylvania Volunteers" continued. This "History" is nothing but a scandalous job for the benefit of Bates, and it ought never to have been sanctioned by the Legislature. The best thing that can be done now is to stop any further payments for it, and let the money that has been expended go, with feelings of congratulation that it is no more. There is not much use in the people of the State complaining about past swindles, they cannot be remedied now, and we are chiefly interand if they wish to effect a reform they must diffuse their energies in so many directions that their best efforts are well-nigh hopeless.

ested in those present and prospective. With 1 "gard to the 'History" the Senate seems disposed to give Bates what he asks for to carry on his interminable rigmarole, but the House proposes to keep the matter in abeyance for a time, and to appoint a joint committee to ascertain the cost, and to notify the State printer to cease the publication until otherwise ordered by act of Legislature. It would be much more satisfactory if further publication were to be forbidden outright, and it is not a promising sign for the discontinuance of this drain on the treasury to find the Senate appointing a committee to harmonize the views of the two houses on the subject.

THE INDICTMENT OF RICHARD

FICKEN. THE District Attorney, Judge Ludlow, and the Grand Jury have taken prompt action in the case of Richard Ficken, and that individual was brought into the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday on a bench-warrant issued on the application of Mr. Gibbons, who stated that he had prepared a bill of indictment against Ficken, which had been returned by the Grand Jury. The bill charges Ficken with assault and battery; with assault and battery with intent to kill; with shooting at with intent to murder; and with shooting at with intent to disable Isaac Barker, a lad who was in company with young Curran at the time he was shot. Testimony was submited to show that Ficken fired a pistol at the boys, and also with regard to the condition of the wounded lad. The boy Isaac Barker stated positively that he saw Ficken fire, and Mr. John C. Curran testified that Ficken came to his house and apologized for the occurrence, offering to bear the expenses of medical treatment for the injured boy, and giving as a reason for the outrage he had committed that he thought it was only one of the alley boys. Mr. Curran very justly thought that this excuse only aggravated the offense, and he refused to let the matter be hushed up.

The surgeon in attendance on young Curran testified, that the ball was still in the limb, where it could not be found, and that the boy's life was in peril, though not in imminent danger. Under these circumstances Judge Ludlow said that the defendant must remain in custody to await the result of the boy's injury, and he also held him in the sum of $5000 bail on the charge of assaulting Isaac Barker. There seems, from the disposition of the court and District Attorney to do prompt and impartial justice in this case, a very fair chance that Ficken will get his just deserts, which, if the boy recovers, under the law will be a fine not exceeding $1000 and an imprisonment not exceeding seven years. If the boy dies, Ficken will, in the language of Judge Ludlow, be called upon to answer for the highest crime known to the law.

IT DISTURBS the equanimity of the Age to find that Foster Blodgett, the United States Senator elect from Georgia, is disposed to be virtuous in a manner totally unprecedented in the annals of the Democratic party. The Age never heard and never will hear of a Democratic Senator elect asking that his character shall be cleared of charges against it before taking a seat in the highest de liberative body of the nation; for if such a practice were to become a general custom, the Democracy would not be able to have any Senators to represent their interests. It would undoubtedly be a good thing for the nation if our Senators and Representatives were obliged to purge themselves as Blodgett proposes to do, but we are not astonished that our esteemed contemporary should become alarmed at the idea of such a precedent being established. Blodgett, in a frank and manly letter, requests the Governor of Georgia to withhold his certificate of election until the charges against him shall have been proved or disproved in the most satisfactory manner. He asserts that these charges were preferred for political purposes only, and that they have been allowed to stand in court, without any attempt being made to prosecute them, solely for the purpose of annoying him and embarrassing him in the Senate. His letter shows that he is not afraid to meet them, and so we exclaim with the Age, "Bully for Blodgett!"

THE LEGISLATURE seems inclined to extend the hand of friendship and forgiveness to Geary again-at least we judge so from the fact that a bill was reported formally in the Senate yesterday appropriating the sum of $1900 to pay the inaugural expenses of the Governor. The inauguration of a Governor of this Commonwealth consists simply in his taking an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Pennsylvania, and to attend to various other matters, such as faithfully execute the laws, etc. Why it should cost such an amount as $1900 to "swear in" Geary at the commencement of his second term, is worth inquiring about in these days of high taxes. Who is to receive the money, and what is it to be paid for? is what we want to know.

THE EPISCOPAL BENCH in the present day by no means represents the whole of the ecclesiastical strength in the British House of Lords. In the ensuing Parliamentary session, besides the twentyfour bishops, there will be nine cierical peers entititled to seats, viz. :—The Earls of Carlisle and Buck inghamshire, Lords Saye and Sele, Scarsdale, Dynevor, Auckland, Brodrick, O'Neill, and Buckburst. This fact marks the rise that has taken place in the social position of the clergy since the days of Parson Adams and Dr. Primrose. Chamberiaine, writing upon the state of England, soon after the Revolution, remarks with evident satisfaction that, "low as the revenues of the Church have been brought by the sacrilege of former times, it has pleased God to suffer so much still to remain as to be an encouragement to the gentry and nobility of the nation to educate their younger children in that way. And the present age can show several of the eminentest churchmen now in England who have at once honored the Church and added a lustre to those eminent families from which they are descended." The list that follows is very brief, and contains the name of only one peer-Lord Crow-who was amply rewarded for his zealous churchmanship with the princely revenues of the bishopric of Dublin.

"CHIEF JUSTICE CHASE," says the Baltimore American, "will find it hard to reconcile his opinion as a justice of the Supreme Court on the legal-tender question with those he entertained when, as Secretary of the Treasury, he became the father of the greenback system;" commenting upon which, the New York Commercial Advertiser says that "the American underrates the savoir faire of the Chief Justice. He is like Daniel S. Dickinson's snake, that 'wired in and wired out', until the devil himself gave up the puzzle of tracking him as a bad job."

THE Cronstadt Messenger says that all the ironclads in the Russian fleet are now provided with new 8 and 9-inch steel guns. Some monitors have been armed with 15-inch smooth bores, and all vessels intended for long journeys have 6-inch rifled steel guns. A huge smooth-bore gun of 20-inches calibre has been constructed at Perm. All these guns were made in Russia. Every man in the navy, too, is now armed with the new rifle according to the Baranoff system.
